

ARTISTIC QUARTERS BEING PREPARED FOR RED CROSS TEA ROOM

That the Red Cross shop and tea room will be opened on the date originally announced, November 1, was the opinion of Mrs. Louis H. Chalmers, the chairman.

Mrs. Chalmers stated that while the special business situation might not warrant a formal opening, the shop and tea room would be open for business on that day. Occasionally, however, the shop will be open for the purpose of a variety of workmen are needed to transform the former dining hall of the Rotary club into a tea room. Room 28 in the West House building will hardly be considered a week hence by those who are familiar with the clean and attractive tea room.

Miss Helen Wade, a local artist of some repute, is in charge of the decoration. The room scheme will be green with gold and red for a contrasting tone. Large curtains with draperies of the prevailing color will be used, and the chairs will be of the same color. The room will be decorated in the most artistic manner possible. The menu will be arranged by Mrs. A. C. Baker, Mrs. David Goldberg and Mrs. H. J. Jones.

There will be different refreshments each week and a practical luncheon will be served daily from 12 until 2 o'clock. Tea will be served from 3:30 until 5:30 o'clock and there will be a social hour after. The menu will be arranged by Mrs. A. C. Baker, Mrs. David Goldberg and Mrs. H. J. Jones.

Mrs. Chalmers while on the western coast and in the east last summer made a study of Red Cross shops and will incorporate the ideas she gathered with many other original ideas in the local institution. She feels and believes the organization is merely the duration of the war, but for many years to come, and in view of its permanent nature she is studying carefully every feature before willing to advocate it.

After the war there will be families in need of the returned soldiers. There will be families in need of the returned soldiers. There will be families in need of the returned soldiers. There will be families in need of the returned soldiers.

She stated that one of the leading features would be the gift shop, which will be in charge of Mrs. E. J. Bennett. Novelties new and old will be offered for sale, and it is believed that many will be donated. There will also be a melting pot presided over by Mrs. E. P. Parker, and below stairs in the salvage department, clothes, hats, shoes, pictures and bric-a-brac will be in stock. While the committee has met with the generous cooperation of the business houses of the city there is need of stock for the Red Cross shop and tea room.

C. P. Buck, an interior decorator, has donated the material to be used in decorations, and the committee in charge is also indebted for services rendered by the Painters' union, Matthews Paint Shop, Bennett Lumber company, Haislett Lumber company, Hummel's, Chas. E. Ryders, O'Malley Lumber company, Valley Lumber company and Shoup Lumber company. The committee in charge have volunteered their services in the kitchen for a week at a time. Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Branch, Mrs. Rosser, Mrs. Ruppert and other colored women who will be their for are members of the Arizona State Federation of Colored Women's clubs. Mrs. Lynn Carter, president, will see for the salvage department.

A 74-YEAR-OLD OFFICER.

(From the Outlook.)
It is said that probably the oldest soldier of his rank on the active list of any army is First Lieut. Richard Powers of Washington, D. C., who is 74 years old and to now with the American expeditionary force overseas. When the army first went to France he served for a time as an interpreter attached to General Pershing's headquarters. He was recently commissioned a first lieutenant and assigned to active duty.

A TROTTEUR FROCK WITH FUR PANELS

This effective trotteur costume is made of navy serge paneled in "baby park." The sailor girl will call it fur panels, but it is really a cloth which is made to resemble fur. The underskirt of the frock is accordion plaited with.

As foreign minister of the Russian Soviet government, George Tchitcherine is one of the chief aides and supporters of Lenin and Trotsky. He undoubtedly got his share of the coin the two traitors received from Germany for betraying their fellow countrymen.

DECISIVE BATTLES ALTER WAR MAP

(Philadelphia North-American.)
The question as to where and when the deciding battle of the present great war will be fought is one which the whole world is asking. The battle of the Somme, Verdun, the battle of the Marne and the great drive against the Hindenburg line were each a great stride toward victory, but only the future can tell just when and where the deciding blow will be struck. And without such a blow, say the historians, no permanent peace can be achieved, for wars of the past show that the end is always brought about by some great decisive victory.

Gettysburg was the deciding battle in the Civil war, and Saratoga is considered as having been the critical light during the Revolution. One must, however, go back some 2,400 years to find the most decisive battle of history, which was fought at Marathon, when the Athenians under Miltiades defeated the Persians and preserved free government.

Equally decisive was the victory of the Spartans over these same Athenians some seventy odd years later, and since then there has been no war in which some battle has not been definitely the deciding struggle. Oddly enough, such battles are almost always fought on land, for no matter how great the victory at sea, it does not seem as efficacious in ending war as does much a victory on land.

Thus, while the battle of Trafalgar in 1805 was the deciding naval battle between France and England since it destroyed Napoleon's hope of invading Great Britain, it was not until Waterloo, some ten years later, that a decisive defeat was administered to Bonaparte by the allied armies of Russia, Austria, Prussia and England.

The Duke of Wellington led the armies, and it was to him that the battle brought the greatest fame, just as in this country Saratoga brings to mind General Gates and Gettysburg, General Meade, in France to think of the famed siege of Orleans is to think of Joan of Arc. For no matter how far one goes back into history there is always one who stands out, an heroic figure in the story of a decisive victory.

Miltiades was the first, but which of the noted generals of the allies and America will be the last is still a vivid question.

In the early days of the empires of Rome and Greece and Persia the winning of a decisive battle usually meant the establishment of a new king and sometimes a new country. For when Octavius defeated the combined fleets of Antony and Cleopatra at Actium in 31 B. C., he at once established imperialism, with all the power in his own hands. Later, at Philippi, he won a decisive battle against Brutus and Cassius and tightened his hold upon the empire.

Alexander the Great was another who sought to conquer the world and hold it in the hollow of his hand and under his leadership the Macedonians and Greeks defeated the Persians in the great battle of Arbela, which was the end of the Persian empire of those days.

OLD MEN INTO THEIR OWN BY WAR'S NEEDS

(From the Detroit Free Press.)
"Young men for action, old men for counsel." Youth for enthusiasm and initiative; age for discretion and caution. A reporter's misunderstanding of an intended-to-be playful remark of Dr. Osler, as to the "scrappings" of men of 60, in military or civil life, are demonstrating that though this is the young man's age, the middle-aged and even the elderly are not on the shelf as has been.

The war has set limits to youth or age. Each is a condition of mind and body rather than a matter of years. There are men not yet 20 who impress others as being contemporary with Methuselah; there are others who are 70 years of age. This is the young man's age only because it offers chances that his father, even his older brother, never had; there is no reason why men of middle age should not grasp them.

COFFEE AND SINKERS CHEER BOYS AT FRONT

(Henry M. Hyde in the Chicago Tribune)

He was a dirty doughboy. Just out of the trenches. He was caked with mud; he stunk worse than a skunk, and his gas mask was underneath his chin. He came into the huge, half ruined stone barn close to the front line and called out "Ma."

An elderly woman pushed aside a canvas screen which cut off one corner of the barn. Her sleeves were rolled up and her hands were covered with flour. "Well, come in," she said.

coffee, ma?"
"Just finished a fresh batch," she said, and a minute later three brown doughnuts and a cup of steaming coffee were on the table before him.

It was one of the front line Salvation Army Huts back of the American sector in France. The woman was "Ma" Burdick, who with her husband, whom the doughboys know as "Pa," is in charge.

Everybody who comes back from the American Expeditionary Force is singing the praises of the Salvation Army men and women and their work in the twenty little huts which have been so far established as close as they get to the fighting line along the American front. And in hundreds of letters and cables from General Pershing down the same story of usefulness, homely, every day human service is told.

"We all know the wonderful work done by the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross," says Commissioner Estill, in command of the western states with headquarters here.

"At every hut there are women, as well as men officers stationed. Our letters and reports make it plain that the boys in the army and most of them are mere boys, appreciate greatly the sight and the influence of a good woman right at the front. Because these women are on duty, and every one of them must be a good cook, we are able to run a little lunch counter in each of our huts. What it means to a tired and dirty boy just out of the trenches to get a hot cup of coffee or cocoa and a couple of doughnuts or a piece of home-made apple pie! Think what it would mean to you if you were three thousand miles from home and mother and were only 19 years old!"

"Then our women are glad to sew on buttons for the boys, even to darn their socks. 'Ma' Burdick, for instance, is a real mother to hundreds of our young soldiers."

"I am sure we will all agree that the influence of a good Christian woman, under such circumstances, is enormous. Judging from some of our financial reports our men and women workers in France are not always careful to collect the five or ten cents which we are supposed to charge for the little lunches served in the front line huts. In fact, I know that no tired and penniless soldier is ever refused his coffee and sinkers simply because he hasn't got the price."
